

ABSTRACT

[0031] Briefly, an apparatus having an outphasing modulator that may provide at least first and second outphased signals to a power amplifier. The outphasing modulator may control amplitude of the first and second outphased signals by an amplitude modulation controller which may vary an amplitude level of first and second control signals base on a desired output power level of said power amplifier.